Course Description

We live busy lives. Each person has 24 hours in a day and 7 days in a week. So why do some people get more out of their time? This class hacks the experts on productivity. Each module offers brilliant insights into getting the most of your precious time out of each day, which can be applied and shared with students and colleagues. Consider lessons learned from minimalists like Thoreau and the Amish. Get straight talk from brutal realist Jesse Itzler, Cal Newport explores Digital Minimalism and cutting the digital clutter through an inventory. Content from David Allen (Getting things Done), James Clear (Atomic Habits), Ryder Carroll (Bullet Journal) and others will help you and your students become good stewards of time. This online class requires basic internet connection, a laptop, or if you're savvy, just a phone. "Never confuse motion for action" -Ernest Hemmingway

National Standards Addressed in This Course

National Board for Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS)

(<http://www.nbpts.org/standards-five-core-propositions/>)

First published in 1989 and updated in 2016, What Teachers Should Know and Be Able to Do articulates the National Board's Five Core Propositions for teaching. The Five Core Propositions - comparable to medicine's Hippocratic Oath — set forth the profession's vision for accomplished teaching. Together, the propositions form the basis of all National Board Standards and the foundation for National Board Certification. Course assignments have been designed so students can demonstrate excellence against these professional teaching standards whenever possible.

- Proposition 1: Teachers are committed to students and their learning
- Proposition 2: Teachers know the subject they teach and how to teach those subjects to students
- Proposition 3: Teachers are responsible for managing and monitoring student learning
- Proposition 4: Teachers think systematically about their practice and learn from experience
- Proposition 5: Teachers are members of learning communities
